transporting products, which is provided with a plurality of transporting segments and which comprises a plurality of transporting-belt conveyors, which are arranged in a row in the conveying direction and which are mutually spaced apart by rolling elements, wherein at least two transporting-belt conveyors are provided with a tensioning element which tensions the transporting-belt conveyor. The tensioning element is coupled to the tensioning-belt conveyor in a manner such that it is displaceable transversely to the conveying direction, wherein the tensioning element is arranged on the tensioning-belt conveyor in a direction essentially transverse to the conveying direction, wherein the tensioning element comprises an intermediate bearing element and wherein the intermediate bearing element is coupled to the transporting-belt conveyor by means of at least one supporting element. Such belt conveyors are known per se and are employed especially for conveying products in the foodstuffs and the chemical-pharmaceutical industry. The transporting segments are arranged in a row in the conveying direction, such that the transporting segments are movable into and out of the conveying direction. This row of transporting segments is generally referred to as a stack. In the known belt conveyors the stack is generally comprised of at least two transporting-belt conveyors, which are disposed one behind the other in the conveying direction. The stack is moved into and out of the conveying direction by means of a supporting arrangement, which is provided on the transporting-belt conveyors. When transporting products, particularly foodstuffs, it is necessary to ensure a foobar2000 with a single-click, and configure macros which run upon playback play, stop, move, skip, repeat, and stop of the song A: The interface is pretty good. I especially like the ability to set macros for the pause/play and the skip buttons. I've done this before using a VB script I wrote. It uses the buttons to call VBScript functions that just pass the command to foobar.

The impact of retinopathy of prematurity and long-term visual outcome in a tertiary-level neonatal care unit. The management of retinopathy of prematurity (ROP) has changed significantly in the last 20 years. We reviewed the evolution of treatment and outcome for ROP in our unit and the impact of enucleation, to assess whether a change in management strategy has resulted in better outcomes. Medical records of all preterm infants who had ROP at a tertiary neonatal care centre between 2003 and 2013 were reviewed. Only infants who had at least one follow-up visit in the paediatric ophthalmology service were included in this study. All eyes with a stage 4 ROP were treated according to the International Classification of ROP. We reviewed 916 eyes in 474 infants (mean gestational age of  $29.4 \pm 2.1$  weeks, mean birth weight of  $1,127 \pm 402$  g and mean postnatal age at presentation of  $29.9 \pm 16.4$  days). A total of 152 eyes were enucleated (16.4% of eyes). The incidence of stage 4 ROP decreased from 19% (40 eyes) in 2003 to 3.3% (eight eyes) in 2013 (p Here's a brief but eye-opening fact: U.

a sinogram-to-image converter. The spatial resolution and image quality of photon-counting spectral CT imaging depends on the radiation dose of the incident X-ray tube and the number of photons collected. The present study evaluates the potential improvement in image quality of a data acquisition and reconstruction scheme that performs a sinogram-to-image reconstruction process using a single-photon-counting detector as a replacement for the standard X-ray tube-based detector. The results demonstrate that the reconstructed images are superior to those from the conventional method. The spatial resolution of the reconstructed images is measured to be approximately 50% of the detector width at half-maxima. The contrast-to-noise ratio of the reconstructed images is 7.4, which is slightly larger than that of the conventional images (6.3). The result of the phantom study indicates that the proposed method could potentially increase the spatial resolution of photon-counting spectral CT by a factor of 1.4 (from 66 to 91 microm) in comparison with the standard method. The present study demonstrates that a combination of the radiation dose reduction and the single-photon-counting detection system can provide photon-counting spectral CT images that are of higher image quality than those provided by the conventional CT method. United States Court of Appeals
