Erectile dysfunction is a common condition in men. By losing erection ability in response to certain stimuli, it puts a man in danger of not having a healthy sex life. It is common that when you were young you were told by a doctor not to masturbate, not to do that, because it's harmful to you. But you did it anyway, you weren't aware of the damage it causes. But when we grow older, we start to notice that our body changes, as we go through puberty, we start to lose erection ability, or it seems to disappear, which can lead to painful erections, or in some cases to full erections but without any response to stimuli. This is also known as "Erectile dysfunction". Erectile dysfunction can occur at any age. It can occur to men of all ages, but there are certain situations, at what age you start to have this condition is very rare. There are many cases of erectile dysfunction that are treated medically, but there are also cases in which the cause is psychological. There are also situations when these cases come as a result of the aging process. Erectile dysfunction isn't a disease, it is something that only affects men, it can even affect women, but they aren't as often affected as men. How to fix erectile dysfunction? When you have erectile dysfunction, one of the problems that you're going to encounter is that you might not be able to maintain an erection. You might have a small erection when you're in a situation of lovemaking, but when you try to extend this erection, it will not be enough, this can have a really bad effect on your self-esteem and your relationship. The good news is, you can fix erectile dysfunction with a simple trick. Firstly, there is no scientific way to prove whether you have erectile dysfunction or not. The best way to determine this is by checking your symptoms and seeing whether you are able to have a full erection, and you're not able to maintain it as long as you need. The second step is to see if you have enough fluids, because there are some medicines that have no effect if you're not having enough fluids. How to fix erectile dysfunction?
