Not all the sound effects are licensed, but the majority of them are. The list includes Godzilla and Godzilla-themed sounds from Toho, the Godzilla franchise, Conan, and the Prince of Darkness. A few additional popular sound effects such as water drops and bullet impacts aren't used, and the soundtrack by Kane & Kane (see Jurassic Park below) is completely original. (It was composed by Basil Poledouris, who has won two Oscars for scoring films - The right man for the job.) The music is perhaps the most essential part of any film noir to recreate authentic atmosphere. And The Howling is a prime example. The score by Bernard Herrmann is completely original, using a collection of Wurlitzer organs (an instrument that is virtually obsolete today), bariton organs (a large, ancient stringed instrument), church bells, and trumpets. Herrmann was known for using unorthodox, tight and emotional orchestrations, and the masterful use of the score in the film is astounding. The best of the score, and the most memorable of the score itself, is the title song. What the editor did was to take the 'Waltz in the Dark' portion of the composition and duplicate it, which created a sort of portal for the camera to enter. This allowed the audience to enter the dark house and see the film as it was meant to be seen - in double exposure. Kenji Misumi's animated short film, The Howling The animation was done by Kenji Misumi, and this is a real master piece of craftsmanship. The animation is amazing - the

How does tachyon energy work? (Advent of Code 509). Wouldn't the later stages of the journey have to be activated in a pool? BlueBerryPool? is short for preliminary. As an optical pickup used to record and/or reproduce data to and from an optical recording medium such as a CD-R/RW (Compact Disc Read-Only/Recordable) or DVD-R/RW (Digital Versatile Disc Read-Only/Recordable), a two-wavelength laser light source having two wavelengths is typically used. When a laser light of a single wavelength is used as the light source, the wavelength of the laser light has been narrowed (wavelength narrowed) so as to increase the recording density of data. For example, the laser wavelength of 650 nm used for recording information to an ordinary DVD-R is narrowed into 405 nm for recording the data to a CD-R or into 400 nm for recording the data to a DVD-RW. The light of the wavelength ranging from 400 nm to 405 nm is attenuated to less than the half level at a time when it is incident on a recording medium. When the laser wavelength is 400 nm, the light intensity becomes 1/20. When the laser wavelength is 405 nm, the light intensity becomes 1/40. Moreover, the laser light having the wavelength of less than 405 nm travels through an optical system composed of lens and the like to the object. This kind of optical system is referred to as an optical path of a relatively long optical path length. Thus, in the case where the laser light is further narrowed to 405 nm or less, the intensity of the laser light is further attenuated at an optical system. For that reason, an optical path of a relatively long optical path length is adopted in the case where the laser wavelength is 405 nm or less to efficiently collect the laser light to the object so that the laser light can be focused on the medium. An example of such an optical system is known to be an optical pickup called a 405 nm optical system with a numerical aperture (NA) of 0.85 or more disclosed in Japanese Patent Publication No. H9-203047. With the reduction in the size and the improvement in the packaging technology, a digital camera is reduced in size and weight. Thus, there has been a demand for the laser light source used for recording and reproducing data to and from an
