I dont mind the settings, but I dont like your justification. This doesnt sell me a story, or what you want to say. Also it doesnt mean a value of 1080p, a value of 4 inches, a value of 100.Perhaps you should make it a bit more obvious? I can confirm this to look odd for your scenario. This is because the resolution sort was done based on 480p, 720p, 1080p, etc.Which in your case actually works as expected: sort by 480p and then title as a secondary argument.It does look a little odd though in your case I agree. I could be wrong, but it does not seem to be 1080p, for a 4 inch result. The 4 inches is a step result, and the x vs. y maybe 4 inches vs. 1 inch. I dont know what the actual quality, and I dont know anything about that sort of math. But it should be changed to be all that, I think. As for typing the value: the default will be filtering by height.Due to cropping out black bars, this may not be ideal. Im not quite sure if and how this would work reliably.Like in your example, say we are looking for 1080p movies. And say the user enters 1080. Then your Matrix movie will not appearSee where things can become a challenge Ill have to look and see what options I can come up with. How can I download?
