yet somehow, we hear people spouting this nonsense as if they meant it. we hear people call for "racial justice" and we are forced to listen to arguments that equality is an evil conceived by some bigoted bad guys in order to keep the system of white supremacy, and to keep their white power and privilege. but people can't seem to realize that our system is already rigged to favor a certain kind of person, regardless of race. the discrimination of today is not a function of some kind of racial conspiracy, but rather, it is a conspiracy of the privileged. politicians and businessmen are able to separate themselves from the populace, then they run for office or work in higher positions of influence where they are able to reap the benefits of the system and help perpetuate the system. for this reason, they have no problem helping a black person get a job at a bank, a post office or a school while they would never consider doing the same for a white or asian person. it is the same for college admissions, where the children of ceos and judges get in ahead of everyone else. the way the system is designed, they get passed on to the next level of privilege, even if they are not actually intelligent or good people. most of us are too busy working, raising a family and keeping up with the bills to pay attention to how our own race is the only one that is allowed to be even slightly successful. even the very richest black or asian people, who grew up rich and attended private schools, often find themselves on the bottom of the food chain by birth. those who try to fight against the privilege within our society, are in fact fighting the system that has worked in place since the beginning of humanity. 5ec8ef588b
