
Donkey Kong Country Returns Wii Iso 13

donkey kong and diddy kong have the abilities to jump in many different ways, but they can only jump as far as their movement speed allows. a player can walk slowly (as though they are running), or quickly (as though they are sprinting). donkey kong has a lower jump height, but the kongs can jump as high as four times their current height. the kongs have no attack range, so they can't attack while jumping, but they can attack in mid-air. donkey kong can also climb very quickly, and diddy kong can climb a little faster than donkey kong. donkey kong's hammers can be used to push boxes and crates on and off of the ground. donkey kong can only jump as high as the height he is, and can only jump on slopes up to 90 degrees. donkey kong can also jump diagonally. donkey kong is vulnerable to being knocked back by barrels, and can be knocked down if the player misses a jump, but donkey kong can also jump over a barrel. in the multiplayer mode, two players can participate in a level at the same time, with the first player controlling donkey kong and the second one controlling diddy kong. if both characters are defeated, two extra lives will be always spent, instead of one, when they reappear at the beginning of the level or latest active checkpoint. if a player's kong moves off screen while it is focused on the other one, after a countdown of three seconds, the character outside will be instantly teleported back next to the current one at the screen. it is possible for the second player's character (diddy) mount the first player's character (donkey) and let the first player to control most of the game. the second player controlling diddy can assist by firing his peanut popguns. this way, both players' characters can share effects from items, such as heart boosts and banana juices. any player also has the option of summoning their defeated character inside a dropping dk barrel by spending one extra life balloon at any moment. but the present player's kong must touch the barrel before it falls below the screen. the dropping dk barrel will be instantly draw towards the present character by pointing the wii remote at the direction of the barrel or by holding the y or x button on the 3ds.
