thanks for your answer, and about comatose, i don't really feel bad about it. in fact i am very glad i have such fanbase, and i was really worried that i'm the only one playing it. if people would have no love for this game, that would be sad for me. welcome to the f&h discord, ryanh! i hope you will be happy with the place! if you would like to know more about things related to f&h, feel free to join us in the discord! it's the best community i ever saw in my long da history. i'm glad i've joined there and i'm looking forward to having you there as well! also since you're new to f&h, let me briefly tell you about some things. back when termina was being worked on as a project, the discord community became quite active. that community was later split into the 70s and the 80s because the 80s team wanted to put more focus on that subcommunities. i personally find that a good thing because i'd rather post here when i have an opinion on something and i think a larger part of people here could be coming here for something related to the 80s rather than the entire community. and i could be right :) now since f&h is being worked on in the 70s, and mostly the 70s discord community is doing that, we are planning to continue that. well we do have the idea to release f&h updates every once in a while which we call "episodes" and then the community itself will pick up and continue the main story in the 80s as per usual but also the other games of the series. we plan to add more content to the game, and to come up with sidequests in that regard. it's not a campaign per se, it's more like what happens in a campaign with some open world features. (unfortunately i cannot discuss it further as that's all part of a project that's not open yet, but i will do my best to explain it.) and of course there will be more epics to release. our epic games get less and less as the f&h series goes on. we could call them even "arcs" if they are a bit more focused on specific characters. or we could call them epics if they keep growing in scale and detail.oh and don't think that f&h is with the deusex fetish of having a pervasively conspiracy theory setting. the setting is mysterious and mysteries unfold. the players form their own opinions and make their own theories. it's a game about investigating mysteries and uncovering a truth if there is one. and our characters are a bit more than just investigative characters. they will have their own stories to uncover, too.
