Calmodulin was exposed to proteinase K which is shown to be a selective proteolytic enzyme of protein-bound calcium. With increasing time of exposure, the calcium binding activity of the proteolyzed calmodulin (t1/2 = 10 min at pH 7.4) was progressively decreased and when completely degraded, it was shown to have lost its calcium binding capacity. The calcium binding ability of the non-proteolyzed calmodulin was not affected by proteinase K. The proteolytic cleavage of calmodulin is thought to occur in the vicinity of the calcium binding site and the resultant modified protein may be capable of binding calcium.Q: Checking the intersection of a line segment with a bounding rectangle in Java I need to check whether a line segment from point A to point B intersects a bounding rectangle R. Thankfully, I have been pleasantly surprised by the game. I am thoroughly enjoying it, and I'm only on the last chapter of the game. This is
