The FAQs below are from the nuvaringo.com website. Answers to the FAQs are available to all. If you were given a series of questions about the NuvaRing prior to choosing it as a contraceptive and it did not answer your questions, please write to us at nuvaringo@yahoo.com.

Q. How do I start the NuvaRing? A. One NuvaRing is worn in the vagina every day for three weeks. First, your doctor, nurse or midwife will remove the old ring from your vagina, then place a new NuvaRing on your cervix or in your vagina. The ring is left in place for approximately 72 hours. It takes 72 hours for the body to break down the old ring and absorb it.

Q. Is it safe to use NuvaRing? A. NuvaRing is a safe contraceptive method.

Q. Does NuvaRing cause UTI's? A. UTI's or urinary tract infections are very common when using the NuvaRing. Taking a daily antibiotic is usually prescribed when you start using the NuvaRing. If you have any symptoms of UTI's, do not use NuvaRing.

Q. Do I need to start using NuvaRing on day one? A. The NuvaRing should be inserted on day one. This is to avoid the ring entering your cervix during your first week of use.

Q. Will I get sick while using NuvaRing? A. NuvaRing is a completely healthy product that will not cause sickness.

NEW YORK — May 14, 2014 — Ventus Medical Inc. ("Ventus"), a worldwide leader in cardiac rhythm management (CRM) and a subsidiary of the Alnylam Pharmaceuticals (NASDAQ: ALNY) Group, today announced results from the randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled Phase 2a study of abetimus in adults with severe congestive heart failure, which is funded by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.¹ Ventus will present the study data at the American College of Cardiology's 65th Annual Scientific Session to be held November 12-15, 2014 in San Francisco, CA. The study met its primary endpoint. The proportion of patients in the abetimus group who achieved two consecutive 12-hour readings of atrial fibrillation (AF) rhythm of less than 30 beats per minute (bpm) at 8 days post-randomization was significantly higher than in the placebo group, at 52% versus 24% (P=0.014), and was well balanced between the two groups. An analysis of the trend over time showed that patients in the abetimus group who achieved this goal remained at that level for the full 48-day follow-up. Patients in the abetimus group also had significantly lower AF burden than patients in the placebo group, at approximately 50% versus approximately 70% (P=0.017), and had a shorter median duration of AF, at approximately 30 hours compared to approximately 150 hours in the placebo group (P=0.022). Ventus will present detailed results

Q: Angular5 / Core-js I am using angular 5 with a bit of Node / Express and I am trying to make use of core-js. My issue is that, I am getting a few imports that are throwing errors. Is there a way to install core-js globally? E.g node_modules/core-js/library/modules/es6.d.ts If this is not possible, how should I go about installing core-js globally? A: It is possible to install core-js with npm but not the es6 implementation. You have to use it from the src directory or the node_modules directory. npm install core-js -save If you would like to use the es6 libs then you can do it like this. npm install core-js@2.0.3 --save The version number is important if you would like to use the es6 standard.

Q: Devise and Omniauth Twitter without OmniAuth Middleware I'm developing a Rails app that requires using Devise for authentication and uses Twitter as the provider of user info (as opposed to Facebook). I'm using the devise_for_omniauth method, and Twitter is working fine when I authenticate. However, the omniauth_callbacks method has the require_route option set to true, and when I reach that point in my app I get an error
