Today's question is always the difficult one. This time I got it because I wanted to learn about Photoshop. So I'm honestly not sure I know better than anyone else. After all, can't you install it yourself?

I've been a hobbyist user of Photoshop for over 10 years, and began with CS3. I've also used Elements, which currently is the most affordable photo software combo. Elements does the basics, and a lot of what you see out there in the fast-paced world of social media. After 7 revisions, Elements has become a full-on program.

Photoshop will suit the hobbyist, the beginner and the competitive amateur - and it will suit the serious professional. Love Photoshop and Photoshop Elements. I use them both. I wish they were on my iPad so I could have my photo catalog around, too. I use Photoshop for most of my editing.

I use Photoshop for the market place and I modify pictures. I like doing edge enhancements and color eliminations. I am a hobbyist. I love using my creato- browsing the market place is the most fun. I don't use Photoshop for the everyday. Photoshop Elements was my only reason for getting on-line until I upgraded. Hands - Down winner. Instant digital hard drive. Absolutely love it. For my uses, the number one choice in all things photo. Love it. Except one thing... I wish I could sell them to for about half of what I was charged for them. This is the best app in the market.

The interface is simple to understand and navigate. I believe I have tablet to scroll around. The desktop to manipulate my photos is great for cropping and red eye fix. The app does take a longer time to load photos but the performance when I do is good.

The exports to web are good too.

The email option is great as well.

The collages is awesome as well but I do not use it as my everyday art program.

The on-line i can use with my mobile to save photos, edit them and everything. It is great for those who love photo management.
