Mujeebabad-e Sefid Mujeebabad-e Sefid (, also Romanized as Mūjīebābād-e Sefid; also known as Mūjīebābād) is a village in Howmeh Rural District, in the Central District of Faryab County, Kerman Province, Iran. At the 2006 census, its population was 4,929, in 1,345 families. References Category: Populated places in Faryab County A private group of researchers based in Germany have recently made some bold predictions about the world's future, and the predictions involve basically everything from a massive mass die-off to the planet's rapid decline in living standards. On the plus side, the group suggests the world's cities will probably be safer as the polar ice caps melt. On the flip side, the world's governments are currently failing in their duty to protect the environment, the group says. Here's how the group's predictions break down. The world's population could decline by up to two-thirds Population decline is inevitable, the group says, but it's happening too slowly. The researchers predict that population will decline to about 9 billion people by 2045. This will mean the world's population will have halved since 1950. Even the U.N.'s new Sustainable Development Goals, which include the goal to "pursue national and international strategies for sustainable development, especially with regard to health and food security," assume that the world's population will be over 9 billion, says Natalie Nougayrède, a French academic and the director of research at the Global Public Policy Institute. This goal is one of the seven goals the UN hopes to reach by 2030. But the researchers say that's probably not going to happen. They say the growth in the global economy is just not large enough to keep up with the demand. There's f988f36e3a
