My domain points to a web application, from which we are trying to access data via a custom query string. I've set up a $URLRewrite rule which I think should be able to modify it so that it should redirect to the requested page. The rule looks like this: $url-rewrite-string = '^ {url}/?(.+)' # remove?customQueryString= if query string is present $url-rewrite-string-new = '$1' if ($request-uri) =~ /(customQueryString=)\/ $url-rewrite-string-new = $url-rewrite-string-new # replace the old URL with the new one. It should include the custom query string. $script:URL = $url-rewrite-string-new Write-Host $script:URL $request-uri = $script:URL That works fine in debug mode, but when I run the script, I get the following error in the Write-Host line. Malformed input '(' for variable $url-rewrite-string-new Is there some kind of additional parameter I need to add to my $url-rewrite-string-new variable? A: According to documentation If you use the one-line rewrite rule RewriteRule ^/path/(one|two|three|four)/(.*)/$1/$2 [L,R] If the rule matches the rule is rewritten to: RewriteRule ^/path/index.php/one/four/index.php?id=one&args=a [L,R] If the query string is empty, the $1$2 parts are removed. Your pattern has the following components: Optional.+, a trailing wildcard, ?(.*), a leading question mark, ?(.*)
