The possibility remains open that the EU is seriously considering the prospect that the ever-present body of member states, which is already concerned at the elections in Hungary and the Netherlands, will be challenged by unelected EU bureaucrats. Or, at a pinch, that a cluster of EU member states may decide to form a grand coalition to challenge the unelected ECJ for overriding constitutional or democratic legislation. The primacy of these institutions is manifestly undemocratic. Of course, the jurisdiction of these institutions is based on a treaty, and therefore primarily on a democratic treaty, the treaties on human rights. There is no limit on how many people can join EU agencies. The ECJ is based on its non-democratic, non-treaty foundation. EU agencies are placed under the control of the president of the European Council, who in turn controls the president of the European Commission, and for that matter other member states of the European Union. The president of the European Council, the head of government of the EU member states, appoints members to executive bodies of the EU. How could it be otherwise? He must not be under the control of the head of state. This is not a democratic principle, but common sense. The president of the European Council is not elected. The president of the European Council is an appointed head of state. The president of the European Council is an appointed head of state. To accept this principle means to concede that the constitutional heads of state, and all the member states of the EU, are placed in an ab
