The new Picture Profile settings can be used to automatically detect and apply profiles to areas of a picture. For example, you can create a Picture Profile rule that says the color is too close to a specific color, and the Picture Profile dialog box will show you where that color occurs on the image. To help you with this, there's a fill and blend mode tool that shows you the pixel values of the color you're looking at. Effects are now available with advanced layers for everything you do in the selection tool and the masking tools. Effects layers offer new blend options, opacity and settings for blending multiple layers into a single image. Enhancing Category Tree views allows you to filter using metadata and even filter by date ranges, keywords, and so on. In addition, you can easily rotate, zoom, and crop images with a new tool bar button. Zooming in operation is also improved. "Sender Effects Brush Commands" for version 5.0 have previously been known as the "Effects brush commands [plugin]," but it's been renamed to a more natural "Sender Brush Commands." The plugin, which is already available in Lightroom 4, makes it easy to apply creative effects to photographs (e.g. removing shadows or adding a retro look). Adobe Aspect Ratio in Guides and Smart Guides have received some improvements. This means, for example, you can now automatically align your crop along the longer edge of a picture if you can't quite tell where it is. You can also, if the crop origin is aligned to a preset position, select a crop origin and drag the crop along the desired edge. It's all really easy.
