image - in one fell swoop. Also useful for hiding areas or types of content. The Rectangular Selection tool allows you to select a previously outlined area and remove it from the document. You can make the Gradient curve, create sharper, or smoother transitions, or use the settings to influence the mixing of colors, change the angle of the gradient, and place the gradient inside, next to, or outside certain areas. The Gradient tool has several other features, too, like the ability to "clone" and "specify the number of colors." Yes, that's a technical term for clone. (Think: copy, combine, create, replicate, etc.) The Gradient Settings are preset categories like Linear, Radial, and Radial with Angular, and allow you to mix these presets to tailor your gradient. For example, you can turn on or off the tool's Whites and Blacks, access additional settings for the Dodge and Burn tools, change how much or how little of those settings will affect the images, and choose from several blend modes, such as Lighten, Darken, Color Dodge, and so forth. e3d0a04c9c
